First, set the limiters for your search. In this example, we'll look for journals on philosophy in French. Click on Limit My Search.

You can limit your search by language, location within the library, a date or range of dates, medium, item type, country of publication, and whether or not the material is still being published. Here we will limit only to Language and Item Type. Note that the term “serial” includes magazines, journals, and newspapers. To select multiple items within a category, hold down the Control button (or the Command button on a Mac) and click your selections.

Now enter your keyword(s). Hint: Use broad or simple keywords like literature, politics, science, anthropology, verse. Search for Keyword Relevance, not Subject. (For more information on using the online catalog or searching, try the online tutorials: <http://library.wichita.edu/reference/libraryinstruction/videotutorials.html>.) Note that your limits are in effect. They will remain in place for the entire search session or until you select Clear Limits.

Click the Search button ...

Et voilà! The library has several journals in French on philosophy.
